LEARN EVENT MANAGEMENT
FROM THE FATHER OF
EVENT MANGEMENT

An eventful institution

Anthony C underlines the key principles that make NIEM one the best event management colleges in India

The bright yellow and orange hoarding at the entrance of the National Institute of Event Management (NIEM) campus entice you to have a look inside. Once in, you are witness to a flurry of activity. Posters of Cricketer Awards, Abby awards, Windsor awards, Femina Miss India, Zee Cine Awards and many such glitzy shows are all over the place. And at the helm of this youthful place is Prof. Hanu Khosrowiwala, dean and director of NIEM. He is also the father of event management in India and founder member of NIEM.

"Apart from class room teaching on varied topics like event accounting, event law etc, we also have workshops conducted by guest faculty from the industry," explains Prof. Khosrowiwala. "Further, field training is mandated in the form of working on live events organised by leading showbiz companies and also planning and organising in-house events," adds he.

Initiated in 1999 after four years of intense research, NIEM has come a long way having established 13 branches across the country. With more than 600 students studying every year the institute has been a regular at almost all big events happening around the country.

GROOMING

Every course, apart from its intrinsic emphasis on learning the skills of managing events, also adds value to the student's personality. Faculty consciently strives to enhance the soft skills of the students. Personality development, table manners, self-confidence are all very subtly ingrained in the pupil.

PROFESSIONALISM

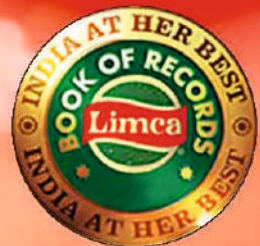

NIEM admits only those students that display earnestness and a passion for events. The courses have been designed in a way that even career professionals can take up them up. Like any quality college, infrastructure at NIEM is also taken care to suffice the needs of the students.
